

TO ANANIAS CLUB FOR AUTHORS OF THIRD TERM STORY

Roosevelt, In Vienna, Manifests Displeasure With Old-time Vigor.

IS LEFT HOMELESS BY HITCH IN PLANS

Visits Emperor—Says He Will Hear Both Sides of Conservation Dispute.

VIENNA, April 15.—Through an error of some members of the reception committee, Colonel Roosevelt found no rooms reserved for him at the Hotel Krantz upon his arrival this morning. Despite the fact that he was the "hon of the hour" and had a triumphal ride from the station to the hotel, absolutely no arrangements had been made for his reception at the hotel. The hotel manager provided for him temporarily in a little room, while one of the most luxurious suites in the hotel was put in readiness to receive him.

United States Ambassador Richard C. Kerens says he thought Baron Hengelmüller arranged for hotel accommodations, and Hengelmüller, who was formerly Austrian ambassador at Washington, says he thought this was Kerens' job.

Anyway, there was a fine lot of confusion in the ranks of the reception committee when the mistake was discovered.

Short and Ugly, Again.

One of the first things Roosevelt did on arriving here was to brand again as a fake a statement that he had consented to be a candidate for the Presidency again. The statement this time was contained in the Paris Herald, which quoted one of its Italian correspondents.

The colonel authorized the statement that the story was a "pure fake." That neither he nor Clifford Pinchot had said anything that could possibly warrant such a statement.

In this connection, Roosevelt said that his meeting with Pinchot should not be interpreted as a desire to hear only one side of the conservation controversy. "I want to hear all sides, on all questions," the colonel said, "and I shall be glad to see anyone who can enlighten me on political conditions. I am sorry that Senator Root could not come to Europe."

The colonel made it plain that he would stand for principles upon his return to America, regardless of parties or persons.

Brands Statement False.

In concluding his remarks, regarding the Paris Herald, the colonel said: "As this is the third false statement in the Herald of a similar character, I must in the future decline to see the representative of that paper."

This was a day of rubbing elbows with royalty for the colonel. It seemed that everybody on the reception committee is a count, or a duke, or a baron, and they swarmed in and about the railway station, resplendent in gold braid and each accompanied by his aides.

The colonel arrived at 8 o'clock and encountered the biggest reception committee of the trip. The committee was headed by Kerens and Hengelmüller. A crowd of several thousand people were massed about the hotel when the colonel arrived, and they gave him a rousing cheer.

Colonel Roosevelt spent two hours with his mail before beginning a strenuous day of calls and social functions. The first of these was with Count von Aehrenthal, Austrian minister of foreign affairs, and one of the commanding figures in European politics.

Interview With Emperor.

The "next stop" was a call upon Emperor Von Hengelmüller, who was an intimate friend of the colonel's family while in Washington.

After luncheon at the hotel, at which former United States Ambassador Henry White, Lieutenant Von Hahne, an African hunter, were his guests, the big function of the day came. This was the colonel's reception by aged Emperor Franz Josef at the palace. This audience lasted more than an hour.

At the Capuchin Church, Colonel Roosevelt placed wreaths upon the tombs of Empress Elizabeth and Crown Prince Rudolph. A visit to the riding school, where jumping horses were exhibited, and an inspection of the crack Hussar regiment concluded the afternoon.

The colonel received a group of local newspaper men and wound up the day as the guest at dinner of Minister von Aehrenthal.
